Shooting Affair At Point Ellis

Last Sunday the Pillar Bay Packing Co.'s Gas Boat Gertrude brought two men in from Point Ellis Cannery who had been shot in a row there Saturday morning. It appears that Joe Guishard, the watchman at the cannery had imported a barrel of bottled beer from Kake the day before and on Friday night himself and six friends were having a little jollification when a dispute arose and Ernest Lamm, Guishard's partner at the cannery, pulled a pistol on C. H. Kelly and threatened to shoot him, in the meantime Tony Swanson, Kelly's partner grabbed Lamm and got him pinned down on the bunk and held him there at the same time he threw the pistol to Guishard to put away in safe keeping, of course Kelly got sore at Lamm's threat and attempted to slap him, while Swanson was holding him, but Swanson covered Lamm's face and Kelly was unable to hit him. Guishard took all the shooting irons and hid them so Lamm couldn't do any damage, a little later Kelly and his partner went to their Gas Boat and turned in for the night, when they were leaving the cabin

Lamm told Kelly he would get him in the morning, however they didn't think any more about Lamm's threat. Apparently Guishard was afraid of Lamm and after he had hidden the guns he went to another cabin and slept that night.

In the morning about 8 o'clock when Lamm got up he went down to the Gertrude, which was laying alongside the wharf and got a 35 calibre Winchester, telling the two men on the boat that he was going hunting, instead of going hunting he went over to Kelly's boat and got inside without waking Kelly or Swanson, he fired a shot right below Kelly who was still sleeping, of course Kelly awoke instantly and Lamm had him covered with the rifle at the same time he said, "I'll give you two minutes to get on deck, the gun is full of lead for you and I have four more cartridges in my pocket for Guishard," of course Kelly was transfixed and unable to move, at this time Swanson who was sleeping in the other bunk said to Lamm, "Dutchy you have nothing against me, let me get out, I don't want to get killed." In order to let Swanson out Lamm backed out of the boat on to the deck and Swanson followed him, when he got behind Lamm he grabbed him around the arms from behind and got hold of the gun with both hands, the two of them scuffled around for a short while, at the same time Lamm kept on shooting the gun, Swanson doing what he could to direct the shots in the water. In the meantime Kelly recovered from the shock and he pulled a shotgun down from over his bunk and loaded it and came toward the companionway when Lamm spotted him, so he kicked at the gun, kicking the gun and at the same time kicked Kelly in the mouth. The force of the kick sent the gun from Kelly's hands at the same time it exploded shooting Lamm in the right leg above the ankle shattering both bones and on the left leg above the knee, and as Swanson was holding Lamm and was right behind him he received part of the shot in both his legs, but his injuries are slight. They at once bandaged up Lamm's wounds the best they could and got him aboard the Gertrude and went immediately to Kake, where they picked up Dr. Krulish, the Government Doctor. He did all he could for the injured man and accompanied him to Wrangell where he was turned over to Dr. Dawes. Yesterday Dr. Dawes amputated his right leg at the knee, but was unable to save Lamm's life, he was weakened so much from the loss of blood that his pulse was imperceptible and the wounds had both become badly infected. Lamm died last night at 11:15. The doctor tried to get a statement from him but he wouldn't tell a thing. There was an inquiry at the Court House Tuesday and Guishard, Swanson and Kelly were examined, the jury did not return a verdict until the other witnesses come from Point Ellis. Guishard left yesterday morning with the Gertrude to bring them over. It also came out that Lamm had at times before drawn a gun on different parties and threatened to shoot them. When the rest of the witnesses are examined we will possibly be able to give all the details in our next issue.

Wrangell Man Is Drowned

Last Saturday evening at five o'clock, Fred Sture, Hans Nelsons partner at Little Telegraph Creek, started for home in a small skiff he had with him a cat tied in a sack taking it over to the cabin. On Monday some of his friends went over to see him but he failed to make his appearance at the cabin so Hans Nelson informed them, Hans is sick and unable to leave the cabin, so the boys started to search the beach, they soon found the sack with the cat in it, the cat dead and had washed up on the beach, a little further on towards town they found the skiff on the rocks all smashed up. Marshall Grant went over and searched the beach for him but was unable to find any trace of him. It is supposed his boat was swamped in the heavy swell that night and he was drowned. Stora was a Finn and has been around Wrangell for some time.

Later—The body of Fred Sture was found on the rocks yesterday morning about 50 yards from the place they found the cat. There was an inquest held over the body this morning, the jury returned a verdict of accidental drowning. Fred Sture was locally known as Fred Stark and was born in Finland in 1858, and was a member of Lodge No. 9 Finnish Brotherhood, Aberdeen, Wash. Stark has been fishing in Alaska for the past 18 years.

Where's The Game Warden?

Word has reached here that there are several halibut schooners anchored off the Islands and the fishermen are in the woods fishing for venison, mild curing it and shipping to Seattle. This should be stopped, Uncle Sam has men in his employ to protect our game from the ravages of such people.

A report came in this morning by a gas boat, that has been over at Totem Bay with some loggers, that a schooner was anchored between Totem Bay and Douglas Bay for the past five days, and the fishermen were in the woods hunting deer and mild-curing them. This should be investigated at once.

On Monday last Judge Thomas sentenced John Linquist to twenty five days in jail for assault and battery.

'Bacon.'

IN recent issues of the Saturday Evening Post there were a series of stories entitled "Beating Back" by Al Jennings, the reformed bandit and train robber. According to Mr. Jennings' accounts it appears that prison life has a tendency to crush out the good that is in a man instead of driving out the evil. The more a human being is crushed the more beastlike he becomes. His hate is deepened, his despair is made more desperate, his will to retaliate upon society becomes iron. Every device is employed to reduce the prisoners, none to develop them. They may not even talk; and at length silence becomes vocal with the horrors of the beat-up mind. Their food is repulsive and nauseous. Their enforced labor is made as uninteresting as possible. At stated intervals prisoners are allowed to see their relatives, once in two months a letter, even then they may not touch them. The husband cannot kiss his wife. A mother is not allowed to caress her erring child. The whole program is to break, break, break the spirit. And this is the result: the fact that even today knows that it hardens, deepens and deepens criminality in the soul, and turns the convict out with hell's hate in his heart. No wonder we have so many criminals in the country when we are trying to outwitted men by cruelty, insult and debasement. Prison system should be reformatory. It should seek to build up, not to destroy. Intelligent helpfulness, consideration and humaneness can alone bring back the last self-respect and straighten out the crooked and warped will.

They who look after society's defectives should be trained alienists, physicians of the mind, and not brutish slave drivers.

Jennings' experiences of prisons was enough to break the strongest will, he certainly had great forbearance to stand the taunts and insults that he was subjected to after leaving prison. He should command the respect of all for the way he persevered and forced himself gradually back as a respected member of society. At the present time Mr. Jennings is an attorney-at-law in Oklahoma City and will be a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor of Oklahoma next year. This all goes to show even what an ex-convict can do with the world against him.

D R. Anna Howard Shaw, the big stick of the bargain counter politicians, seems to be on the verge of following in the footsteps of the notorious Mrs. Pankhurst, the militant suffrage leader in Great Britain. Mrs. Pankhurst's visit to the United States has inflamed the American suffragettes to such an extent that they will be exceedingly forward in their demands. The demand for an amendment to the federal constitution is going some. If we should have the militant movement in the United States it will mean sneering hand-rails with rust putting muriatic acid into mail boxes, putting bombs in the public building, burning barns, smashing windows, defying the police, then the starvation process. It is to be lamented that our old friend Carrie Nation is not here to give them a hand with her little hatchet, she could give our English friend Mrs. Pankhurst cards and spades. Milady Militant hates the tyranny of man, her dominant attitude becomes one of supercilious contempt not love. Eventually she is unloving, unlovely and unloveable, and the fighting attitude, continued, will disrupt any home, for when fighting becomes a habit, an excuse for fighting can easily be found, the willingness of a suffragette to sacrifice herself for the good of the cause, is beautiful just in the degree that you admire martyrdom. But please remember that martyr and persecutor shift places with lightning like rapidity. The tactics of the militants are offensive, harm must follow such tactics, since it supplies in itself an argument why women should not be allowed to help make the laws. The ability to abide by the law is the test of fitness for citizenship. Before they are fit to give orders, they should show their ability to take them. The fact that woman is a woman does not lessen the crime of arson nor make window smashing part of a holy war. Great reforms require great patience on the part of those who would bring reformation about. Equality is all right and will eventually come but the thought of the supreme sway of a battling terriblant tongue makes one pause.

Mrs. Pankhurst takes the bun, curtains and all, for sliding in and out of the toils. The British author should buy a gilded cage for her, lock the door and lose the key. The old girl is sure a 'rara avis' and evidently enjoys being caged.

Ole Horgheim of St. Michael wharf left for Seattle a few days ago, Ole's mission to Seattle is a mysterious one, he has aroused the suspicious of the "tin can" gang. Its to be lamented that Ole had to go to Seattle, considering all the pretty girls of marriageable age in Wrangell.

Fred Willson, manager of the local Saw-Mill left for Seattle on the Northwestern, on a business trip. It has been rumored about that Fred may bring a stenographer back with him to wash dishes in his new home.

Ted Cunningham and Frank Adams returned from Bradfield this week. They succeeded in coaxing 10 martens, 10 bears 23 mink, and some ermine into their traps. Teddy always has the right kind of bait.

"The Kerry Gow" meaning the blacksmith from the Country Kerry. This is one of those old Irish production that takes you back to the time that a man could not call his soul his own. The scenery is beautiful being taken in Ireland. Joseph Murphy was the author of the story and played the leading role for years. The Kalem players with his permission made it into a motion picture feature of three reels. At the Rink Saturday night, Don't miss it.

Fred S. Johnston has joined the Sentinel force last week, he will have charge of the Editorial Department and will, we are sure, do his utmost in making the paper just what Wrangell should have. Incidentally he is a Notary Public and is ready to handle legal work, and can be found at any time at this office.

Mill Makes Big Showing

Some people imagine there is nothing in the lumber industry in Alaska but they are badly mistaken, next to mining and fishing our timber is a matter of great importance. The Bertha brought a consignment of 180,000 feet of spruce lumber to Seattle from Hadley to be used in the construction of buildings for the Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco. The commercial possibilities of the Alaska spruce, since this lumber has proved the finest of Northwest soft woods, have been given serious consideration by Puget Sound interests and the use of it in the construction work of the Panama Exposition is regarded as a great opportunity for the exploitation of the Alaska product. Alaska will some day wake up to the fact that the timber of this country can be used to advantage other than salmon boxes and fire wood. Now that the Alaska lumber industry is assuming great proportions, and that Wrangell has the finest saw mill location in Alaska as well as the oldest established mill in Alaska, that of the Willson & Sylvester Mill Co. Inc., formerly the Willson & Sylvester Estate. Despite the fact that this mill has been tampered with the red tape that necessarily go with the rulings or the courts this mill has in the last ten years made a net profit of $75,607, in the year 1911 the sum of $13,628 was cleared, this goes to show how the mill was managed notwithstanding the reports to the contrary. This coming season the mill will have received a complete overhauling and a large new edger will be installed which will greatly add to the capacity, which was heretofore about 5,000,000 feet of lumber a season. This industry which means so much to Wrangell should be boosted to the fullest extent, when the old mills whistle stops talking there seems to be a quiet reigning over our peaceful town and everybody looks forward to the time the mill will start again, it only means about $7,000 a month to Wrangell while in operation for labor and logs, nearly all of which is spent at home. Keep your little hammer in your pocket and help one of our oldest and best industries.

The Humboldt sails south Monday morning, upon her arrival at Seattle she will discharge her cargo and proceed to San Francisco where she will receive a complete overhauling and have oil burners installed.

Your Duty To Help

Is Wrangell going to pay her tribute to her old soldiers who are at the Pioneers Home at Sitka? All the other towns in Alaska have taken up subscriptions to send to the Home to inject Christmas cheer into the old men's hearts. Christmas comes but once a year and some of these old men probably have no living relatives to remember them and to cheer them up at this particular time when the whole civilized world is supposed to be at peace. What will our offering be?

Entertainment Best Yet

The Moose entertainment last Friday night was the best yet. Miss Calkins, Tilitha Ensley, Olive LaBounty, Mrs. Thurson and Mr. Albrecht contributed to the program. Miss Marie McKinney and Mr. Matt Johnson won the first prizes in the whist game. Mrs. J. Bjorge and Mr. Adolph Jakobitz captured the booby prizes. After lunch was served everybody participated in the games which were played until a late hour, the good time was wound up with a Virginia Reel. The Moose have some good times at their entertainments. Better look into this boys.
